Designed for internationally acclaimed artist Sam Gilliam, the project is conceived as a sculptural living pavilion positioned at the edge of Rock Creek Park. The house is experienced along a path of distinct moments; a walled garden and entry courtyard facing Quincy Street, a low sky-lit service bar that contains kitchen and baths, and a glass enclosed tent that provide porosity to the Park.

The exterior walls and courtyard are clad in weathering steel, recalling the textures and hues of the adjacent forest. Flamed stone paving is utilized inside and out while juxtaposed with Sapele mahogany windows and doors and marbelized-acoustical plaster, highlighting the tension between the refined and raw while showcasing the hand-work of the artisans.

The landscape is thought of as a singular gesture of Mazus groundcover separated from the weathering steel walls by a moat of Grotto stone pea gravel. A sculpture will be positioned between the house and Park, while a grove of multi-stem Amelanchier activate the entry courtyard.
